Experience Suva

A Modern Metropolis in a Tropical Paradise ...the best of both worlds

Suva, the capital city of Fiji and the largest metropolis in the South Pacific islands region, is located in Central Province on the southeast coast of the largest island in the group, Viti Levu. Suva has a rapidly growing population of more than 350,000, nearly half the nation's population.

Along with the most diversified mix of Fiji and South Pacific Islanders found anywhere in the world, Suva is the location for regional organizations, diplomatic missions and the University of the South Pacific, adding further to its existing multi-ethnic population mix.

Active and Entertaining

Travel for less than an hour by car along the coast (half that time by boat to nearby islands) and you will find many intimate spots for a picnic, an enjoyable sunset dip on a stunning beach or go further inland and upward to experience jungle-like terrain – shades of Robinson Crusoe.

Suva boasts a striking level of different architectural influences that make a walk or drive around the city area a practical lesson in the city's history. Possessing powerful colonial influences, Far East Indian and Muslim building accents and of course, many structures with traditional Fijian features, the city is an eclectic journey with historical connotations around every corner.

Memorable Scenes

With mountains to the north and west, a skyline composed of multi-generational architecture and more living green throughout than you're likely to find in any urban area in the world, Suva presents a remarkable organic mosaic of smiling visages and sultry vistas.

Suva residents take maximum advantage of their port and waterfront areas. The port bustles with maritime activity nearly 24 hours a day while walkers, joggers, general onlookers and other sea loving types frequent the 'seawall' area enjoying this truly stunning, natural harbor and its buffering mountains.

Welcome to Suva, where a visit becomes an indelible journey of warm impressions for the spirit and the soul.
